LARGE CROWD AT CATHOLIC PICNIC

Threatening Weather does not Prevent Big Attendance. Over Three Hundred Were there for Dinner. Special Rate on Trolley Cars.

Threatening skies did not deter a large crowd from enjoying the Catholic picnic at Round Top to-day. The clouds kept the sun from making the day unpleasantly hot and fully five hundred people took advantage of at least half a day in the woods. Three hundred and ten tickets were sold for dinner at noon. In former years there have been twice the number of patrons for supper as there were for the noon meal and it is thought to-day will be no exception to the rule.

A special rate of ten cents for the round trip was arranged for with the trolley company. In order to secure this rate patrons were required to have tickets when they boarded the cars. They were on sale at a number of business places throughout town. Many people went in automobiles and some drove to the grounds but the greatest number used the cars that maintained a schedule of one trip each half hour during the day.

Dancing at Rosensteel's pavilion began shortly after two o'clock. The St. James orchestra was engaged for the day. Plenty of dancers kept them busy during the afternoon while the ever-increasing crowd was an indication of what the evening would be. Many people from town who were unable to leave their employment before, quit work several hours earlier than usual to hurry on their way "a picnicking."

One of the amusement devices kept busy during the day was an invention of Ed. Godori's to take the place of the familiar "hit the coon" attraction. It consisted of a large wooden head, grotesquely painted, with two enormous wooden eyes held in place by hinges attached to the rear. When either of these eyes were hit by a ball they would swing back, giving the impression that an eye had been knocked out.

The crowd of the day was made up to a large extent by middle aged people. To-night the younger generation will take charge and leave no doubt to tourists who may go past that there is a real picnic in progress.

KILLED THE MOST

Unenviable Record Goes to W. M. Ry. because of Thurmont Wreck.

Nineteen people were killed by train accidents in June in the United States and six of these were killed at the train wreck on the Western Maryland near Thurmont, according to a list of derailments and collisions published in the "Railway Age Gazette" on August 6.

Three collisions are recorded, the Frederick county wreck, heading the list with 6 killed and 6 injured. The other two were on the Chicago, R. I. & P., and the Mobile & Ohio. The Thurmont wreck was the only collision in which both of the trains were passenger trains. June 24 is given first one, the second being on the 27th and the last on the 29th. In the second collision three were killed, and in the M. & O. only one was killed.

There were 7 derailments in June, nine people in all being killed. The Thurmont collision was due "to a mistake of the train dispatcher, who sent conflicting orders," says the Gazette.

SUPERINTENDENT MAKES REPORT

Prof. Roth sends Annual Report of School Year to Superintendent of Public Instruction. Items which have not been Published before.

County Superintendent Roth has just made his annual report, which is one of the legal requirements under the school code, to the superintendent of public instruction, Dr. N. C. Shaeffer. The leading paragraph sums up the year as being one of "steady progress and uniformly successful work."

Prof. Roth attributed this to a general spirit of co-operation among those engaged and, "to the courtesy and support of the county papers."

Among the items of interest not previously published are that one hundred and three of the teachers employed are enrolled as members of the State Educational Association. This is considered a very fair number for the county.

Of the two hundred and twenty teachers employed twenty-nine were without previous experience; seventy-eight held provisional certificates; forty-three held professional certificates; twenty-seven held county permanent certificates; sixty-seven were normal school graduates and graduates of colleges.

Farther on the report highly commends the eight high schools that the county now possesses and states that they have been doing splendid work. It says: "The number of young people graduated from these schools this year was forty-three. The remarkable feature about this number is that twenty-three of these are boys. A large per cent of them will attend higher institutions of learning."

Forty-three boys and girls of the rural schools qualified for the common school diploma and the majority of them will attend high school next year. Eight hundred and sixty pupils in the county were perfect in attendance during the year and were given the Certificate of Award.

The report, which is a comprehensive review of the entire fiscal year goes on to give various other information which was related at different times throughout the year.

INTERESTING BOOKLET

Gettysburg Figures Prominently in Booklet Issued by Railroad.

"The Blue and the Gray" is the title of an historical booklet issued by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, descriptive of battlefields on or near its lines and which bear evidence of bitter conflicts which stirred the American people in Revolutionary days during the second war with England in 1812 and the Civil War in the United States. The booklet is attractively prepared and elaborately illustrated by views of points of historic interest, the cover design embodying the emblems of the men who wore the Blue and of those who wore the Gray, supporting the Stars and Stripes.

Of the interesting illustrations are the headquarters of General Washington at Winchester and at Valley Forge; the headquarters of General Meade and General Lee at Gettysburg and the monument which marks the high-water mark of the Lost Cause during this battle. The description of the battle of Gettysburg is from the account of General H. S. Huidekoper. The booklet is being distributed complimentary to students of history and tourists.

FEW PATRONIZE POSTAL SAVINGS

This Department Nearly Forgotten at the Local Office. Only Time it was Really busy was during the Celebration in 1913.

Among the town's institutions that are being permitted to expire in undisturbed quiet is the postal savings department of the local post office. It is so seldom spoken of and so little used that the window for that branch of the service remains closed, and once in a long while being noticed by a patron of some other department it will bring forth the inquiry, "Is the savings department discontinued?"

The clerk in charge, George Black, says with the exception of the novelty seekers who opened accounts when it was instituted, and the foreign element that at different times has been employed in or near town, the patronage has never amounted to anything.

At the start of the department quite a number of town residents opened accounts and for a time made payments on them, but soon learning that the interest was little more than half that given by the banks and building societies they made no effort to increase their deposits and most of them have long since been withdrawn.

By far the busiest time since its inception was for several weeks preceding and during the reunion in 1913. Characters of every description flooded the town at that period and many of these were not accustomed to patronize banks but realized it was not safe to carry any considerable sum of money and they flocked to the postal department. Numerous accounts nearly reached the limit of $100 for the month. These accounts were all withdrawn at the end of the celebration.

At the present time there are but five or six so-called active accounts—accounts on which payments are being made from time to time. These are old customers who save throughout the summer and when work is slack in the winter they use this saving for their living expenses. The limit that any one customer is allowed to have on deposit at one time is $500. There is some agitation from communities that are inhabited by a large foreign element, to have this raised but the necessity from this point is not pressing. The largest deposit we have ever attained was $425.

MISS RACHAEL AIKEN

Resident of McSherrystown Died at her Home after Long Illness.

Following a prolonged illness of almost one year from a complication of diseases, Miss Rachael Aiken, died at her late home, No. 219 Main street, McSherrystown, Sunday. She was aged 65 years, 3 months and 29 days.

The deceased was a daughter of the late Dr. George and Lorraine (Simpson) Aiken, and was born in Libertytown, Md., April 9, 1850. Forty five years ago she moved with her parents to McSherrystown, where the remainder of her life was spent. She was a good friend to all who knew her and a devout Catholic.

Miss Aiken is survived by one brother, Charles G. Aiken, and a sister, Miss Sallie G. Aiken, both at home. The funeral was held Wednesday, from St. Mary's church, where a mass of requiem was observed, Rev. P. J. Enright officiating. Interment on the family lot in Conewago Chapel cemetery.

CAMP MEETING

Services at Griest's Park began Monday. To Continue all Week.

Dr. A. S. Fasick preached the opening sermon at the camp meeting held at Griest's Park, near York Springs, this week. The first service was held on Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock, when an union choir sang under the direction of Mr. I. L. Taylor, of Gettysburg. All Hall Mac Day was observed in the Camp on Tuesday, when Dr. Gibel, the famous blind composer, addressed the assembled audience.

An instrumental quartette from New Oxford will be present in the afternoon and evening of August 15th.

UMPIRE HAS "FAN" ARRESTED

Results of the Fracas at Frederick when the Fans Mobbed Cleary are Coming in. What Frederick Paper Says about the Affair.

Echoes from the fracas at Frederick on Monday in which Cleary, the Blue Ridge umpire, was saved from being mobbed by the police, are beginning to come. William Roberts, one of the fans who took serious objections to Cleary's view of the game has been arrested on a charge of assault and battery. In its account of the affair, one of the Frederick papers says:

"As the result of the trouble between fans and Umpire Cleary at Agricultural Park yesterday afternoon, William Roberts will to-day be arraigned in police court to answer a charge of assault and battery. It is alleged that Roberts struck Cleary in the face. Following the trouble at the ball park Policeman Blumenauer swore out a warrant for the arrest of Roberts, who resides on East Third street.

Last night club officials stated that every effort will be made to prevent a recurrence of such scenes as were witnessed at the game yesterday afternoon. Nothing will be left undone to keep the good baseball reputation of this city from being further lowered by mobbing of umpires, it was stated. Luckily, Cleary was not injured in the trouble and it is said that he will be on the job again to-day."

In its account of the game itself the same paper credits Herril with pitching a wonderful game, and goes on to give this account of the trouble between Cleary and the players.

"Early in the game, Cleary, who seemed anxious to show his authority, had fined Herril, of Gettysburg, $5. Nevertheless, he showed a partiality toward the visitors all during the contest and in the twelfth inning he called Agnew out at second when "Rabbit" was apparently safe by a mile. It was the third out and as Morrison passed "his umps" on the way to the outfield he disputed the decision, but not in an unruly manner. He had hardly opened his mouth when Cleary, in an arrogant manner, chased him to the bench. Agnew, while walking to his position, remarked that he was safe and straight away followed his boss to the bench. Morrison and Agnew were each fined $5."

KIME—KIME

Fairfield Couple are Wedded at Gettysburg.

Dr. R. S. Oyler, pastor of the Methodist church here, married J. A. Kime and Mrs. J. W. Kime, both of near Fairfield, Tuesday afternoon. While both bride and groom had the same family name they were not related. Both have previously experienced the delights of the matrimonial sea. The groom had the ceremony of his former marriage performed in the Methodist parsonage at Gettysburg 43 years ago. The old building has long since been out of existence, but he declared Monday he wanted to get as near to it as possible. They will reside on Mr. Kime's farm.

HAY FEVER IS WITH US, FRIENDS

Our Well Known Annual Ailment on the Job. Sneezes to the Right of us and Sneezes to the Left of us. Some Medical Dope on Subject.

Let those now sneeze who never sneezed before, and those who always sneezed now sneeze the more. All of which is merely preliminary to saying that the hay fever season is here. Members in good standing of the Hay Fever Club will now begin, or have before this begun, the annual task of seeking relief, and, unhappily for them will find, as they have always found that there is no balm in Gilead for this malady. Hay fever will last as long as the hay. No longer and no shorter.

However, for the consolation of those to whom it can bring no better air, the medical fraternity has discovered a definition for what ails the sufferers. Here it is, "Hay fever is an educative catarrh of the conjunctival mucosa caused in hypersensitive individuals by the sensitizing anaphylatoxic action of the pollen of certain plants." There, all ye sufferers, that is what ails you, and you can go on your sneezing way with a fresh supply of handkerchiefs. Between sneezes it would be good practice to try and pronounce the words of this definition. In looking over the list it is apparent that they were selected more for sneezing than for pronouncing.

Incidentally, it may be added that so far (they had better knock on wood) the Adams County members of the Hay Fever Club are not so much in evidence as in former years. Some think that the queer weather featuring the start of the season has discouraged the germ. They hope he will never recover his courage.

A German scientist, who is now in the trenches, has made an exhaustive study of the hay fever game, and while he has not offered a cure with the necessary kick to it, he has gathered information that was considered sufficiently valuable to incorporate in the new edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica. The encyclopedia reader learns that hay fever is more common among women than men. The fact that you see more afflictions among men than among women probably is due to women's success in staying behind closed doors in the sneezing season. If there is anything a woman abhors it is a red nose. Men, at least many of them, don't mind it.

This German scientist discovered that hay fever is hereditary. The engenic sharks probably will be looking into this affair, for no one wants to bring a hay-fever victim into the world.

And a most appalling statement is that the affection is more common among town people than country folk, despite the fact that hay fever is just what the term implies. It's stuff that comes from the grass family and surely there is as much of this pollen in the country as there is in the town. Another stickler is that close observation shows that the intelligent and the generally high-browed are more susceptible to the hay bug than the common or rough-neck variety of town dwellers.

WEIGHT REDUCED

Minimum Weight for Car of Peaches Reduced.

Lancelot Jacques, Smithsburg, who sent a telegram to the Interstate Commerce Commission, requesting a reduction by the Western Maryland Railway of the carload minimum on peaches from 20,000 pounds to 16,000 pounds, has received an answer granting the request and the reduction went into effect on August 10.

This reduction of minimum weight from 20,000 to 16,000 pounds, it is thought, will be quite an advantage to the peach growers along the Western Maryland Railway and will enable them to compete with the shippers on other lines. The reduction effects all points on the Western Maryland system.

ZEPPELINS AGAIN RAID ENGLAND

Fourteen Killed in Attack on East Coast.

BOMBS STARTED MANY FIRES

One Airship is Blown Up at Dunkirk After It is Hit by British Guns During Attack by Aeroplanes.

London, Aug. 11.—A squadron of German Zeppelins, believed to have contained five of the giant airships of the latest pattern, swooped down upon the east coast of England and dropped bombs which killed fourteen persons and wounded the same number. The dead are one man, nine women and four children.

Several fires were started, but did little damage. The night was dark and foggy. The Zeppelins were promptly engaged by British aeroplanes. One of the German craft, badly damaged by British shots, made off for Ostend, but her destruction was completed on the way by aeroplanes from Dunkirk, whose shots disabled her and then caused an explosion which completely wrecked her.

One of the British aviators, a sub-lieutenant, was killed while making a landing in the dark.

The official account of the raid says:

"A squadron of hostile airships visited the east coast Monday night and Tuesday morning between the hours of 8.30 P. M. and 12.30 A. M."

"Some fires were caused by the dropping of incendiary bombs, but these were quickly extinguished and only immaterial damage was done."

"The following casualties have been reported:

"Killed, one man, nine women and four children. Wounded, nine men, seven women and two children."

"One Zeppelin was seriously damaged by the gunfire of the land defenses and was reported being towed into Ostend. She has since been subjected to continual attacks by aeroplanes from Dunkirk and a under heavy fire."

"The night was extremely dark and was accompanied by thick fog in places which rendered night flying by aeroplanes very difficult."

"It is reported that Flight Sub-lieutenant R. Lord, who was one of the pilots sent up to engage the enemy, was killed in landing in the dark."

A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says that five Zeppelins were sighted on Wednesday near the entrance of the Scheldt river. They were taking a southerly course in the direction of the Scottish coast.

Following the practice in other raids, the British command account of this latest Zeppelin invasion sup- presses the locality raided, and is vague about the damage done.

ALLIES TEMPT BULGARS

Envoys Follow Up Overtures to Balkan States by Move at Sofia.

Paris, Aug. 11.—The correspondence at Salonika of the Hava Agency telegraphs that diplomatic representatives of France, Russia, Great Britain and Italy have delivered a joint communication to the Bulgarian government with a view to procuring the collaboration of that nation with the allies, as a part of a common understanding with the Balkan states.

This action was taken in conjunction with the presentation of similar communications to Greece and Serbia, as recently made known. It is in response to Bulgaria's request on June 14 for information from the quadruple entente powers concerning the advantage she might expect in exchange for her active co-operation with them.

MAXIM INVENTS GAS SHIELD

Device of American Protects Soldiers From Deadly Fumes.

Paris, Aug. 11.—Hiram Maxim is credited by the London correspondent of the "Pettit Parisien" with having invented a simple and inexpensive contrivance to protect soldiers from the effects of deadly gases employed in battle.

The device is designed to cause the gases to rise and pass over the heads of the men against whom they are directed.

Austrians Return to Poland. Amsterdam, Aug. 11.—A Vienna despatch to the "Handelsblad" says: Baron d'Andrian Warburg, former Austro-Hungarian consul-general at Warsaw, will return soon to that city and that many other Austrian nobles men of Polish descent intend to take up their residence in the Polish capital.

Archduke to Rule Poland. Turin, Aug. 11.—The newspaper "Stampa" announces that Archduke Stephen, of Austria, will be chosen king of Poland if the Teutonic allies carry out their program of making Poland into a buffer state, under the protection of Germany.

ARMY FROM POLAND HURLED ON ITALIANS

30,000 Veterans Rushed to Defence of Gorz.

Geneva, Aug. 11.—The appearance on the Italian front of Austrian troops released from the Russian campaign is announced by the "Tribune" in a despatch from Laibach, Austria.

These troops, to the number of 30,000, equipped with artillery sufficient for two army corps (80,000 men), attacked the Italians outside of Gorz. The Italians brought up additional artillery, and after a battle of fifteen hours, the despatch says, forced the Austrians to retreat into Gorz, leaving 2000 dead on the battlefield.

The Italians are said to have gained an important point strategically by joining forces between Romans and Doborodo, south of Gradisca. The Austrians endeavored in vain to prevent this junction, losing heavily in the effort.

Advices from Udine declare that General Cadorna, the Italian commander-in-chief, has decided not to resume the offensive on a large scale until his troops are well settled and organized in the positions lately occupied.

The losses of the Austrians in wounded alone are reported to have reached a total of 85,000.

ALLIES GAIN AT STRAITS

Latest Foothold on Gallipoli Peninsula is at Karachall.

Constantinople, Aug. 11.—The Anglo-French allies have effected a new landing on the Gallipoli Peninsula near Karachall, on the Gulf of Saros. It was officially announced by the Turkish war office.

London, Aug. 11.—Troops of the entente allies of the Dardanelles made a gain of 200 yards on a front of 300 yards east of the Krithia road, on the Gallipoli peninsula. It was officially announced here. A fotoling has been gained on Chanak Bahr and another landing effected elsewhere, the statement adds.

$21 COAL IN FRANCE

Returning Traveler Also Predicts Winter of Hardships.

New York, Aug. 11.—Brewster Davenport, of Boston, who has been serving in the American ambulance corps in France, returned on the steamship Rochambeau.

He said the outlook for the poor people of France during the coming winter is serious, and that there is bound to be much suffering. Coal, he said, is now selling at $21.50 a ton, and indications are that food is going to be scarce and expensive.

Canada Has Sent 80,000 Men. Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 11.—Canada has sent about 80,000 soldiers to Europe for war service, according to figures given out here. These men are now in France on active service or completing training in England. From 60,000 to 65,000 men are being trained at various camps in the dominion and corps are being despatched to Europe at frequent intervals. Men are still offering themselves for various services in large numbers.

Two Struck by Lightning. Scranton, Aug. 11.—Two men were struck by lightning and seriously injured during a thunderstorm here. John Lavelle was struck while crossing a vacant field, and is paralyzed below his waist. Bernard McAndrew was struck and also is paralyzed.

CZAR PREPARES TO GIVE UP VILNA

War Office Orders the City Evacuated.

LOMZA TAKEN BY STORM

Russian Armies May Retreat Further Into Interior—German Fleet Fails to Capture Gulf of Riga.

Petrograd, Aug. 11.—Evacuation of Vilna, capital of the province of Vilna, has been ordered by the Russian war office.

The treasures of the great libraries and museums are being removed. Official announcement to this effect was made and caused dismay. Vilna is a city of nearly 200,000 inhabitants and an important railway center 55 miles southeast of Kovno and about 225 miles northeast of Warsaw.

The announcement of its evacuation was the first intimation that had been given that the retreating Russian army would abandon the Kovno-Grado-Brest-Litovsk line of defense and withdraw farther into the interior of Russia.

Kovno and Grodno constitute the main defenses of Vilna, which is on the Warsaw-Petrograd railway, and it is considered highly improbable that the Russians would evacuate it if they expected to keep the two fortresses.

Riga, the great Baltic seaport, government seat of the province of Russian Courland, was attacked on Sunday by a German fleet of great strength, according to an official statement issued by the war office.

Nine battleships, twelve cruisers and a large number of torpedo-boat destroyers made persistent efforts to force a passage through the entrance to the gulf of Riga, but were repulsed by the fortifications guarding the gate to the important city.

One of the cruisers and two torpedo boats of the German fleet were badly damaged by Russian mines, says the report, but the repulse of the attack was due in the main to the activity of the czar's seaplane flotilla.

LOMZA TAKEN BY STORM

Berlin, Aug. 11.—Fort No. 4, at Lomza, which is situated on the Narva river, seventy-two miles southwest of Suwalki, has been occupied by German forces, according to an official statement issued by the German army headquarters staff.

Surging toward the second line Russian fortress of Brest-Litovsk, one hundred miles east of Warsaw, the Austro-German forces of Field Marshal von Mackensen and Archduke Joseph Ferdinand are sweeping away all resistance at every point where the Russian rear guard makes a stand. Continuous fighting and retreating are wearing down the Russians to complete exhaustion, declares prisoners; but on the other hand there is no evidence that the German drive has lost any of its original velocity.

If the Austro-German forces are able to continue their steady advance the Russian army of Grand Duke Nicholas may find upon their arrival at Brest-Litovsk a human wall through which it cannot cut.

BABY SEAL CHOKES

Seizes $1200 Diamond Bar Pin Dropped by Woman.

Atlantic City, Aug. 11.—The effort of a baby seal, captive in a tank on the Million Dollar Pier, to emulate an ostrich, cost it its life.

Incidentally, patrons witnessed a battle of five seals for possession of a diamond bar pin valued at $1200, the property of Mrs. J. H. D. Sander son, of Washington.

It was feeding time for the seals and patrons were crowded around the open tank as the keeper tossed in small fish. Mrs. Sanderson leaning over to watch the animals, caught the pin on her sleeve as she lifted her arm and it dropped on a platform where the seals were flopping about. Thinking it was a fish, the seals reached for it. There was a struggle and the baby seal dropped over into the water. It was badly injured but took the pin with it.

The keeper had to empty the tank of 15,000 gallons of water to get the seal. The pin was lodged in its throat and a bullet was sent through its head to end its suffering. The pin was recovered. Mrs. Sanderson bought the skin and will have a neck piece made of it to set off the pin.

Gets 2,000,000 Rifle Order.

Lancaster, Pa., Aug. 11.—George J. Atkins, promoter of the Marlette Manufacturing Company, has closed a deal in New York, for the manufacture of 2,000,000 rifles. The Marlette plant will be renovated and employment will be given 500 persons. An advance ment of $350,000 has been posted.

Kaiser Replies to the Pope.

U-BOAT DESTROYS BRITISH WARSHIP

Auxiliary Cruiser Sent to Bottom Off Swedish Coast.

Berlin, by wireless to Sayville, L. I., Aug. 10.—The British auxiliary cruiser India, of 7900 tons, has been torpedoed off the Swedish coast. Eighty members of the crew were saved.

The India was attacked at a point north of Bodge, when entering Rest-fjord. The rescued men were picked up by the Swedish steamship Goetland. The India belonged to the Peninsular and Oriental Line and was built in 1896.

British Destroyer Sunk.

London, Aug. 11.—The British destroyer Lynx was mined and sunk in the North sea on Monday, the admiralty announced. Four officers and twenty-two of her crew were saved.

Aeroplane Sinks Submarine.

Constantinople, Aug. 11.—A submarine of the entente allies was sunk near Bulair by a Turkish aeroplane which threw bombs upon the craft. All the crew were lost.

Norwegian Ship Sunk.

London, Aug. 11.—A despatch from Christiania says that the Norwegian bark Nordland has been sunk by a German submarine. The crew was rescued. Submarines have also sunk three trawlers. Two lives were lost.

ATTACKED WITH AX

Steelton Woman Assaulted and Home Ransacked.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 11.—Unconscious from wounds in her head inflicted by an ax that lay by her side, Mrs. John Patterson, of Steelton, was found in bed at her home in a serious condition. The house had been ransacked and money and valuables stolen. Mrs. Patterson may die.

In the last month, there have been six similar outrages in Steelton, in each case the robber making off with his booty after attacking a sleeping woman with an ax or hatchet. The authorities will ask the state for a detail of constabulary to run down the "hatchet fiend," as he has been termed.

German Loss Heavy in East.

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 11.—A despatch to the "Tribune" from Innsbruck, Austria, says that in recent fighting along the section of the eastern front running from the Pissa river to Ostrow, northeast of Warsaw, the Germans lost 65,000 men in killed or wounded, but succeeded in capturing the principal fortified positions of the Russians.

Five Years For Shooting Cup. Wilmington, Aug. 11.—Patrick Cunningham, of Philadelphia, who on July 5 shot and dangerously wounded William J. Davidson, a policeman, who was arresting him for fighting, was sentenced to a fine of $1000 and five years in the workhouse.

CHAPTER XX.

The World at Gail's Feet.

Callers for Mrs. Helen Davies, and a huge bouquet of American beauties for Gail. Into the Louis XIV room, where Nicholas Van Ploon and Miss Van Ploon sat with unusual impressiveness, Mrs. Davies came arrayed in the black velvet afternoon gown which gave her more staidness and more impressive dignity than anything in her wardrobe. Miss Van Ploon, who was a true member of the family, in that she considered the Van Ploon family before any individual, quite approved of Mrs. Davies, and was in no wise jealous of being so distinctly outshone in personal appearance. Nicholas Van Ploon also surveyed Mrs. Davies with a calculating eye, and bobbed his round head slightly to himself. He had canvassed Mrs. Helen Davies before, and had discussed her in family council, but this was a final view, a dress parade as it were.

Half an hour later Mrs. Helen Davies, leaving her guests in the Louis XIV room, paused at the top of the stairs to calm herself. "The Mrs. Waverly-Gaites' annual faded into dim obscurity. Mrs. Waverly-Gaites' and beg Gail on her bended knees to attend the annual, and Mrs. Helen Davies could attend if she liked. She went into her own room, and took a drink of water, and sat down for thirty or forty seconds; then she went into Gail's suite, where she found that young lady, all unconscious of the honor which was about to befall her, reading a six-hundred-page critique of Chopin's music, and calmly munching chocolates out of a basket decorated with eight shades of silk roses.

"Sit down and have a chocolate, Aunt Helen," hospitably offered Gail, slipping a marker in her book.

Mrs. Davies consumed a great deal of time in selecting a chocolate, but she did not sit down.

"Shall you be at liberty this evening, Gail?" she inquired, with much carelessness.

"Why?" and Gail, whose feet were stretched out and crossed, in lazy ease, looked up at her aunt sideways from under her curling lashes.

Mrs. Davies hesitated a moment.

"Houston Van Ploon would like to call."

"Are they still downstairs?" Gail suddenly unrolled her eyes, and brought her slippers squarely in front of her divan. Also she sat bolt upright.

"Yes," and Mrs. Davies betrayed signs of nervousness.

"Are they making the appointment for Houston?"

"Yes." The word drawled.

"Why?" and Gail's brown eyes began to crackle.

Mrs. Davies thought it better to sit down.

"My dear, a great honor has come to you."

Gail leaned forward towards her aunt, and tilted her chin.

"Houston wants to propose, and he's sent his father and sister to find out if he may!" she charged.

"Yes," acknowledged Mrs. Davies, driven past the possibility of delay or preparation, and feeling herself unjustly on the defensive.

"I shall not be at home this evening," announced Gail decisively, and stretched out her feet again, and crossed her little gray slippers, and took a chocolate. "Or any other evening," she added.

Mrs. Davies lost her flutter immediately. This was too stupendously serious a matter to be weakly treated.

"My dear, you don't understand!" she protested, not in anger, but in patient reason. "Houston Van Ploon has been the unattainable match of New York. He is a gentleman in every particular, a desirable young man in every respect, and gifted with everything a young girl would want. He has so much money that you could buy a kingdom and be a queen, if you chose

Gail glanced at him quickly, but his face was clear of any apparent purpose.

Calmly Munching Chocolates.

pose. He was gazing straight ahead, his clean-cut profile, always a pleasant thing to look upon, set against the shifting background of rocky banks as if it were the one steadfast and unalterable thing in the universe; and he was smiling introspectively.

"It was about here that it happened," he went on. "I think I'd been bragging a little, and I think you meant to slyly prick my balloon, which I will admit seemed a kind and charitable thing to do."

"What was it?" wondered Gail, trying to recall that unimportant conversation.

"Oh, a gentle intimation that I hadn't done so much," he laughed. "I had just finished consolidating all the traction cars in New York, subways, L's, and surface; and I felt cocky about it. I even remarked that I had achieved the dream of my life, and intended to rest a while. All you said was, 'Why?' and his laugh peeled out."

"I used to be conspicuous for impertinence," smiled Gail. "I'm trying to reform."

"I'm glad you hadn't started when I met you," returned Allison, steering around a sharp stone with the firm accuracy which Gail had so often admired. "I never had so stinging a reproof as that little whiff. It did me more good than any sermon I ever heard."

Gail looked at him in questioning perplexity. She could not gather what he meant, but she had a sense of something big, and once more she was impressed with the tremendous reserve force in the man. His clear gray eyes were fixed on the road ahead, and the very symbol of him seemed to be this driving, top speed, a long road, a steady hand, a cool determination, a sublime disregard of hills and valleys which made them all a level road.

"Why? That word set me out on a new principle that never, while I had strength in me, would I consider my work finished, no matter how great an achievement I had made. I am still at work."

Something within her leaped up in answer to the thrill of exultation in his voice. To have been the inspiration of great deeds, even by so simple an agency as the accidental use of a word, was in itself an exalting thing, though a humbling one, too. And there were great deeds. She was sure of that as she looked at him.

"When I was a boy I lived on ancient history," he went on, with a smile for the bygone dreamer he had been. "I wanted to be a soldier, a great general, a warrior, in the sturdy old sense, and my one hero was Alexander the Great, because he conquered the world! That's what I wanted to do. When I grew older, and found how small was the world which Alexander had conquered, not much bigger than the original thirteen states, I grew rather disillusioned, particularly as I was working at about that time for a dollar and a quarter a day. I spent a few busy years, and had forgotten the dream; then you said 'why' and it all came back."

"Hurry!" commanded Gail. "Curiosity is bad for me."

"Let me build it up, step by step, for you. Incidentally, I'll give you some confidential news which you will be reading in months to come. I hope," and he laughed, "that you will not tell your friends the reporters about it."

"Cross my heart, I won't," she gayly replied. The sting of her one big newspaper experience had begun to die away.

"When you asked me why, I was trying to secure Vedder court for a terminal station for my city traction lines. Vedder court quickly became, in my imagination, the terminal point not only of the city traction lines, but of the world's transportation. From that I would run a railroad tube to the mainland, so that I could land passengers, not only in the heart of New York, but at the platforms of every street car and L and subway train."

"How wonderful!" exclaimed Gail, in enthusiasm. "This was an idea she could grasp. 'And have you secured Vedder court?'"

"It's a matter of days," he returned carelessly. "The next step was the transcontinental line. I built it up, piece by piece, and today, under my own personal control, with sufficient stock to elect my own directors, who will jump when I crack the whip, I possess a railroad line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, so direct, so straight, and so allied with ninety-five per cent of the freight interests of the United States that, within two years, there will not be a car wheel turning in America which does not do so at the first step leading out of Vedder court. The news of that consolidation will be in tomorrow morning's papers, and from that minute on, the water will begin to drip from railroad stocks."

"How about Uncle Jim's road?" Gail suddenly interrupted.

"I am taking care of him," he told her easily. "From Vedder court run subways along the docks."

"I see!" interrupted Gail. "You have secured control of the steamship companies, of the foreign railroads, of everything which hauls and carries!"

"Airships excepted," he laughingly informed her.

She was silent now, and he left her silent, brooding, himself, upon the vast scope of his dreaming, and planning still to center more and more the fruits of that dreaming within his own eager hand.

Roseleaf Inn, Gail recognized it with a smile as they turned in at the drive. She was glad that they had come here for it was linked in her mind with the beginnings of that great project, of which she had been the impulse, and in which the thing in her that had been denied opportunity because she was a woman, claimed a hungry share. At his suggestion—it was more like a command, but she scarcely noticed—she telephoned that she was going to remain to dinner with Allison; and then they enjoyed a two-hour chat of many things, trivial in themselves, but fraught now with delightful meaning, because they had to think on so many unexpressed things, larger than these idle people about them could conceive, or grasp if they knew.

Homeward again in the starlit night still in that whirl of exultation. It was somewhat chillier now, and Allison bundled her into the machine with rough tenderness. She felt the thrill of him as he sat beside her, and the firm strength with which he controlled the swiftly speeding runabout, was part her strength. They were kindred spirits, these two, soaring above the affairs of earth in the serene complacency of those who make trifles of vastness itself. They did not talk much, for they had not much to talk about. The details of a scheme so comprehensive as Allison's were not things to be explained, they were things to be seen in a vision. Once she asked him about the bringing of the foreign railroads into the combination, and he told her that this would only be accomplished by a political upheaval, which would take place next month, and would probably involve the whole of Europe. It was another detail; and it seemed quite natural. She was so interested that he told her all about his foreign visitors.

In the park, Allison stopped at the little outlook house where they had climbed on that snowy night, and they stood there, with the stars above, the trees below and the twinkling lights stretching out to the horizon, all alone above the world of civilization. Below sounded the clang of street cars, and far off to the left, high in the air, there gleamed the lights of a curving L train. That was a part of Allison's world which he had long since conquered, a part which he already held in the hollow of his hand; and the fact that every moving thing which clung upon a track in all this vast panorama was under his dominion, served only to illustrate and make plain the marvel of the accomplishment which was now under way. Beyond that dim horizon lay another and still another, and in them all, wherever things moved or were transported, the lift of Allison's finger was to start and stop the wheels, to the uttermost confines of the earth! Oh, it was wonderful; wonderful! And she was part of it.

It was there that he proposed to her. It did not surprise her. She had known it when they had entered the park, and that this was the place.

He told her that all this empire was being built to lay at her feet, that she was the empress of it and he the emperor, but that their joy was to be not in the sway, not in the scepter and crown, but in the doing, and in the having done, and in the conceiving and having conceived.

Was this a cold painting of pomp and glory and advantage and reward? He added to it the fire of a lover, and to that the force and mastery and compulsion of his dynamic power. She felt again the potent thrill of him, and the might and sweep and drive of him, and with the hot, tumbling words of love in her ears, and her senses a-reel, and her mind in its whirling exultation, she felt between them a sympathy and a union which it was not in human strength to deny! Something withhold the word of promise, on the plea that she must have more time to think, to consider, to straighten out the tangle of her mind; but she suffered him to sweep her in his arms, and rain hot kisses upon her face, and to tell her, over and over and over, that she belonged to him, for ever and forever!

NATURAL BORN HUNTERS.

Brazilian Natives Are Only Rivalled by Those of Australia.

If you want to find a thoroughbred sportsman you must look among the natives of the Brazilian forests. Especially among the Botocudo, to whom tracking game is the chief business of his life. He does it with such skill that he fills the white man with awe and wonder.

However enthusiastic a huntsman you are you will feel yourself a poor sportsman after watching him for a little while. The Botocudo hunter glides stealthily through the forest. He understands every sign and habit of bird and beast. He knows how high up an armadillo displaces the leaves of a tree in passing. He can distinguish the tracks of the snake and the tortoise. He can follow the tortoise to its burrow by the scratches of its scaly armor on the mud. His sense of smell is so keen that it helps him a great deal in hunting. Hidden behind the trunk of a tree he can imitate the cries of birds and beasts to bring them within range of his deadly poisoned arrow. He can even entice the alligator by making his rough eggs grate together where they lie under leaves on the river bank. If he shoots at an ape and the animal does not fall he will climb up after the animal by a hanging creeper where no white man would climb. However dark the forest, he is indifferent to this darkness. Laden with his bag of game he finds his way back to his hut by the sun and the lay of the ground.

His only rival is the Australian native. He will lie in wait behind a screen of boughs. He waits until the kangaroo comes to drink, or he will track him for days in the open. He will camp by his fire to be ready for his pursuit at early dawn. He keeps unseen to leeward.

When a number hunt together they will put up a brush fence in two long wings, converging toward a pit, and so drive the kangaroos into it. They also form great hunting parties for bat-eating, surrounding half a mile of bushland, and with shouts and hoots they drive all the game to the center, where they can close round and dispatch them with spears and waddies. In following they show the sameadroitness. A native will swim under water, breathing through a reed. He merely covers his head with water and tucks into his belt. They rarely need to make use of dogs in hunting, though they had learned this way of hunting long before the white man knew anything about it. They used the dingy or native dog. Chicago Herald.

Then They Enjoyed a Two-Hour Chat of Many Things.

Never Deceive an Animal.

In Faint and Fleshy appears the following advice as to the training of animals, to which you will wish to refer.

"You never can train a dog, cat, or any animal, wild or tame, unless you gain its entire confidence and affection. To do this you must never deceive it, not even for fun, and always protect it and show that you love it."

"The way to a man's heart is through his stomach, and the road to the affection of an animal is by way of its taste."

"An apple, a bit of tender grass or some tasty bit will soon make friends with it, and kind words and petting will make it a loving and obedient friend."

The River Jordan.

Religion, history and nature conspire to make the Jordan the most famous river of the earth. Across it the hosts of Israel were led into the Promised Land; in its waters the Christian rite of baptism had its birth; up and down its valley many civilizations in the morning of history rose and fell. Perhaps the strangest thing about this famous river is that none of the ancient empires guessed that its mouth was below the level of the sea. It was not until 1874 that accurate measurements were made and the mouth of the river was found 1,292 feet below the Mediterranean, less than sixty miles away.

The Karroo Bush of South Africa.

The karroo bush provides against drought by roots of enormous length stretching under ground to a depth of many feet. At the end of a ten months' drought, when the earth is baked brick dust for two feet from the surface, if you break the dried stalk of a karroo bush three inches high you will find running down the center a tiny thread of pale green tinted tissue still alive with sap.

Jones says his wife is the most thrifty woman he ever knew. "Why, sir," he says, "she has made ten beds spreads during the last two years; made them herself, sir, out of the samples she collected in her shopping tours during that time."—New York Globe.

I Remember, I Remember.

I remember, I remember, The house where I was born; The little window where the sun Came peeping in at morn. You'd hardly know the old place now, For 'dial is up to date, And the farm is scientific From the back lot to the gate.

The house and barn are lighted With bright acetylene, The engine in the laundry Is run by gasoline.

We have silos, we have autos, We have dynamos and things, A telephone for gossip, And a phonograph that sings.

The hired man has left us, We miss his homely face; A lot of college graduates Are working in his place.

THOUSANDS TRAPPED BY NEW NARCOTIC DRUG ACT.

Physicians and Druggists Fall Into Net Set by Harrison Law.

"Some evidence of the effort being made by the government to enforce the Harrison narcotic drug act is shown by the fact that the number of physicians and druggists so far arrested for alleged violations of its provisions has reached into the thousands," declared Dr. B. R. Rhee of the anti-narcotic bureau of the treasury department.

"We are contending with two great problems in enforcing the law," the doctor continued. "One is the physician, who will write a prescription when there is no necessity for his so doing, and the other is the druggist who sells without the proper prescription. Most of the arrests have been from these two classes of violators of the law, though, of course, some peddlers of the drug have been apprehended."

"Under the present conditions, however, every peddler must get his supply from some source over which we keep a watch, so that is a phase of the work which can finally be checked up, though not, of course, immediately in all cases. One of the principal troubles now is that prior to March 1, when the law went into effect, a number of druggists stocked up with morphine sulphate, cocaine, and other forbidden drugs, and then failed to enter them all on their inventory. In such cases, unless we can get the goods on them, they may dispose of large quantities of the drugs at fabulous profits through selling to peddlers who have no prescriptions, and peddle even to peddlers."

"We are working the druggists against the physicians in the hope of checking up those who do not seek to comply with the spirit of the law. The druggist can tell, by the size of the doses, whether the purchase is legitimate. Should the drug be for an addict the doses should be gradually reduced. On the other hand, for an incurable, to whom the drug is given merely to relieve pain, the doses should show a mild rate of increase, as naturally to assuage the same pain the amount of narcotic must be constantly increased."

"Our inspectors, of course, could detect the filling of prescriptions at different drug stores on inspecting the narcotic prescription files of every store and would at once look into any suspicious case."

SANTA DRAWN INTO WAR.

Children to Protest Because They Can't Get Toys From Germany.

Secretary Lansing need not be surprised if one of these mornings when he reaches his office he finds waiting for him a little plump old gentleman with a long white, wearing, like some of the women these days, summer furs and bearing in his hand a formidable petition, signed by all the boys and girls of America, protesting against the British orders in council.

There is reason to suspect that this gentleman, Mr. S. Claus, is really a German-American and that his original name was Kris Kringle. The cause that is expected to bring him down from the north pole to brave August weather in Washington is the interference of the British blockade with his importations of Christmas toys from Germany.

It is estimated by several persons in Santa's confidence, notably by Arthur G. Hayes, an American attorney for several American toy importing firms, that $15,000,000 worth of German toys for America will be held up.

POPULAR MECHANICS

Truing Front Wheels.

Whenever an auto driver feels that the steering device is not responding as it used to he should investigate the cause. If the car steers hard and shows an inclination to run off to the side of the road unless held in place it means that something is wrong. Perhaps all that is needed is a little oil on the steering column parts. Perhaps the worm and sector portion is binding. But first of all determine if the front wheels are true. Sight along the axle and see if it has been bent. Next take a pole and, after setting the front wheels as true with the rear wheels as possible, measure across the two front wheels about fourteen or sixteen inches from the ground at the back side of the wheels. Now measure at the same height, or as nearly as possible, across the front portion of the front wheels. If these distances vary, the wheels are not parallel. They can be made to parallel by lengthening or shortening the cross member of the steering device. If the wheels are not true they will wear out tires very rapidly, besides making the car ride hard and steer badly.

Pusher and Tractor Aeroplanes.

The Burgess-Dunne biplane is one which secures automatic control by virtue of the design of the supporting surfaces. The wing surfaces are joined in an obtuse angled V, which gives a greater inherent stability than the rectilinear design, says the Engineering Magazine. This is a "pusher" type, which differs from the tractor type in that the propellers are behind the planes, while in the latter the propellers are in front. The advantage of a wider field of view and area of fire for rapid fire guns mounted in the front of this tier is apparent. The Burgess company, however, manufactures the tractor type as well. The objection to the "pusher" type is its low speed and less sensitive response to manual control, a necessary sacrifice to safety, but one which the military service cannot afford to make; hence the tractor type is preferred by the military, while the "pusher" type is more acceptable to the sportsmen.

Hand Truck Attachment.

In order to make it possible for a workman to manage a heavily loaded two wheeled hand truck with less physical exertion than is ordinarily required an attachment has been devised which holds the cargo in place, allowing the mass to be tilted forward until its center of gravity is over the wheel axle. When the attachment level floor is down it is thus relieved of the weight of the article it is moving, his concern being merely to maintain its balance while propelling the truck, says Popular Mechanics. This enables him to handle much heavier load than could be negotiated otherwise. The device consists of an anchor and chain attachment housed in a tube which is attached beneath a truck. By tipping the latter forward against the object it is to carry the chain is drawn out to the required length, locked by dropping one of the links into a narrow slot in the neck of the tube and the hook engaged at any convenient point. The device may be attached to any two wheeled truck.

Grinding New Gears.

Sometimes when a new fitting gear or other gear is inserted in an engine it makes considerable noise in meshing with the old gears. Often this noise is very distracting to a careful driver. This can be corrected to some extent by the careful use of coarse emery mixed with thick grease. Work it into the teeth as the engine is rotated, and be very careful that none of the emery gets into the working bearings. It will soon cut down the teeth to a smooth fit. Wash the gears off with kerosene care with coal oil when the job is done. Use a grease gun to spray coal oil over the gears to remove the emery.

Care of Inner Tubes.

Here's a little hint that may save you trouble. Did you ever notice how carefully your inner tube is packed when you get it from the manufacturer? The valve stem is incased in a pasteboard tube. Here's the reason: If the valve stem is allowed to rub against the tube it won't take long to cut a hole through the rubber. And if the tube is allowed to rub around in the tool box or under the seat of your car it will have holes in it when you need it most. Pack it carefully, so that abrasion is impossible.

WARSHIPS SAIL FOR VERA CRUZ

Commander McNamee Feared
Anti-Foreign Uprising.

ASKED FOR A SQUADRON

The Present Development is Believed to be Outgrowth of the Pan-American Interference.

Newport, R. I., Aug. 11.—The battleship Louisiana, flagship of the fourth division of the Atlantic fleet, sailed for Vera Cruz, Mexico.

The crew had spent the day loading supplies and coal after receiving orders from Washington to be prepared to leave at a moment's notice. Shortly after the New Hampshire also weighed anchor and set out for Vera Cruz.

Feared Anti-Foreign Uprising.
Washington, Aug. 11.—Commander McNamee, the senior American naval officer at Vera Cruz, asked the navy department to send a battleship squadron to guard against anti-foreign demonstrations.

He reported that natives have made incendiary speeches in the streets of Vera Cruz against Americans and other foreigners, and that there had been numerous endeavors to incite uprising although no overt act has yet been committed.

Following the receipt of this request news was received from Newport, R. I., that the battleships Louisiana and New Hampshire cancelled all shore leaves suddenly, filled their bunkers and store rooms hurriedly and made every preparation to leave at a moment's notice for Mexican waters.

It was also reported that if the emergency should become pressing the battleship Connecticut, now in Haitian waters, and about two days' sail across the gulf would be ordered to join Commander McNamee. The Connecticut could reach Vera Cruz several days ahead of the New Hampshire and Louisiana.

Although there are other small naval vessels in Mexican waters, the gunboat Sacramento, on which Commander McNamee has his flag, is the only American naval vessel at Vera Cruz.

Commander McNamee's report did not give details, but officials here believe that anti-American feeling which he reported is a direct outgrowth of the pan-American negotiations in Washington for the adjustment of differences between the factions. Other developments in Mexico, such as General Carranza's expulsion of the Brazilian minister and his differences with the Brazilian ambassador because the countries of both participated in the pan-American conference are taken as evidence of Carranza's displeasure with the stand the United States has taken.

WILSON'S ANNOYER ESCAPES

Writer of 'Neutrality Letters' Leaves
York Before Official Arrives.

York, Pa., Aug. 11.—Captain Charles Wright, of the United States Secret Service, who was slightly cut about the face in a train accident on the Pennsylvania Railroad near Phoenix, Md., was on his way to this city to apprehend a crank who had been annoying President Wilson, with letters and telegrams on the subject of neutrality.

Captain Wright continued his trip to this city but the man, who was registered at a local hotel as Ernest Holmes, of Toronto, Can., had left York. The stranger arrived Sunday and is said to have dispatched several telegrams to the president during the day, and was well dressed, of middle age and seemed to have plenty of money.

MEXICAN BANDIT IS KILLED

Marauders Attack Soldiers Near Border
But Are Beaten Off.

Brownsville, Tex., Aug. 11.—United States cavalrymen and Mexicans fought again, this time near Mercedes. One Mexican was killed. None of the troopers were reported hurt.

Six United States cavalrymen were on border patrol duty near Mercedes when the Mexicans attacked them. The soldiers captured four horses from the attacking party. Parties of armed farmers and merchants have gone from Mercedes and other towns to try to capture some of the marauders.

Smallpox Scares Harrisburg.
Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 11.—More than one hundred persons are believed to have been in contact with Charles Ludwig, a dairyman, who has been found to have smallpox. He served a hotel much frequented by Philadelphia automobile parties. Wholesale vaccination is going on under state direction.

Killed First Day in Mines.
Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 11.—Charles Arnage, 31 years old, former policeman, former councilman and salesman, was killed by a premature dynamite explosion at Indian Ridge Colliery. A widow and four children survive. It was the victim's first day in the mines.

$50,000,000 IN GOLD
ON TRAIN GOING TO N.Y.

Britain Sends Treasure to Pay
For War Orders.

New York, Aug. 11.—The value of the gold shipment from England to New York, now on its way here from Halifax by special train, is $50,000,000, according to R. E. M. Cowie, vice-president and general manager of the American Express Company, which has the shipment in charge.
There has been much speculation in financial circles as to the value of the shipment, which was variously reported to be from $15,000,000 to $100,000,000. J. P. Morgan & Co., the consignees, refused to give any information regarding the amount or the purposes for which it is to be used.
Guarded by a score or more heavily armed men, the special train of seven steel baggage cars, containing the gold, passed through Bangor, Me. None of the guards left the train during the brief stop, and railroad officials maintained the greatest secrecy regarding it. A pilot train preceding the special.
A banker who is directly interested in the transaction said there was nothing in the transaction which should be regarded as startling or cause surprise. Questioned further on this point, the banker pointed out that in view of the extremely low level of sterling exchange and the large purchases which are being made here by Great Britain, the shipment of gold was a logical step to relieve the exchange situation.

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

A Vegetable Party.

The invitations for this party may have a picture of a vegetable cut from a seed catalogue and pasted on the upper right hand corner, or, if preferred, the invitations may each be cut in the shape of a different kind of vegetable and the words written thereon.

When ready to begin the entertainment of the afternoon the hostess should pass little books decorated with pictures of farm products and containing the following numbered questions:

1. The vegetable Pharaoh saw in a dream?
2. What vegetable is composed of letters of the alphabet?
3. What vegetable would be bad in a boat?
4. What vegetable could play the drum?
5. What vegetable is a letter and frozen water?
6. What vegetable is a barnyard product and a vegetable growth?
7. What vegetable is the employment of some women and the dread of all?
8. What vegetable brings water and is a relative?
9. What vegetable means to draw, a narrow bed and a kind of tree?
10. What vegetable is admitted, part of a needle and to suffocate?
11. What vegetable is colored?
12. What vegetable is a kind of court?
13. What vegetable asks permission?
14. What vegetable is a wagon and decays?
15. What vegetable does one like increased?
16. What vegetable is often wasted?
17. What vegetable is wise?
18. What vegetable is filled with money?
19. What vegetable is a vehicle and old?
20. What vegetable is a foreign city and to grow?

Answers.—1. Corn. 2. Pens. 3. Leeks. 4. Beets. 5. Rice. 6. Egg plant. 7. Spinach. 8. Pump-kin. 9. Sue-cot-ash. 10. Artichoke. 11. Radish. 12. Squash. 13. Lettuce. 14. Carrots. 15. Celery. 16. Thyme. 17. Sage. 18. Mint. 19. Cabbage. 20. Brussels sprouts.
When all have written the answers the hostess collects the little books, makes out the scores and awards the prizes to the successful guessers.

Transpositions.

1. Transpose remained in existence and have the worst of characters.
  2. Transpose, a heavenly body and have animals much disliked.
  3. Transpose a building material and have a man's name.
  4. Transpose to move with the tide and have a wild animal.
  5. Transpose grain stalks and have skin blemishes.
  6. Transpose to praise and flatter and have double.
  7. Transpose part of a stairway and have fondlings.
  8. Transpose a marsh bird and have a falsifier.
- Answers.—1. Live, evil. 2. Star, rats. 3. Lime, Emil. 4. Flow, wolf. 5. Straw, warts. 6. Land, dual. 7. Step, pets. 8. Rail, bar.

Animated Scenery.

Of sanctuaries for the eighteenth century debtor the value of the theater must not be overlooked. As long as the actor was in the bounds of the playhouse he was safe. There was John Palmer, for instance, who lived in his dressing room at Drury Lane for months. But engagements, even at Drury Lane, come to an end, and at length Palmer was required at the Haymarket. The journey was a dangerous one. Necessity, however, always fosters invention. They packed him in a cabinet, put the cabinet in a cart and called him "scenery."

Wasn't the Uniform.

A sailor under the influence of liquor went to the main entrance of a New York theater recently and presented a ticket. The manager refused to admit him, telling him that his money would be refunded at the box office.

"Don't you respect y'r country's uniform?" asked the bumbling one.
"Sure," retorted the manager. "Take it off and I'll put it in a stage box."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Infallible.

"Do you believe that there is really something which can invariably tell when a man is lying?"
"I know it."
"Ah, perhaps you have seen one of the instruments?"
"Seen one? I married one."—Houston Post.

Dying Without a Will.

In the event of one's dying intestate the heirs come in for their share of the estate as established by the laws of the particular state in which the property is found. In the event of no will and no heirs the property goes to the state.—New York American.

MAN AND HIS LAUGH.

Self Restraint and Its Effects Upon Human Emotions.

Laughter is a sign of high development. The nearer one is to the animal the less one laughs. The more highly developed we become the more do we perceive humor. For laughter, it must be remembered, is a sign that an emotion has suddenly been set free. It is like a touch on the trigger of a gun, the gun being self-restraint.

No one ever tells an animal (in the wild state) that there are certain things that he must not do. There is no direct prevention of an act that the animal wants to perform. Consequently the animal has no self-restraint.

Man, on the other hand, is surrounded by commandments from babyhood onward. He is always being told by some one, first by his parents, then by the laws of society, that there are things that he must not do. The desire to do these things, coupled to the knowledge that he dare not do them, causes a tense emotion. The animal lives as the occasion rises. Man is kept up by the continuous conflict of occasions.

It is the relief from this keeping up that gives rise to laughter. The greater the tension caused by the delay between impulse and act the funnier does the thing seem which releases it. Something which would seem only moderately funny if it happened in the street becomes screamingly ludicrous in church because of the tension of feeling that one must be solemn. When a snowball hits a silk hat the sight makes one laugh because of the feeling that whatever else a silk hat might be intended for, it was not as a target for snowballs. Exaggerations are often funny, because they twist our emotion from a usual to an unexpected channel.

A story teller who laughs at his own jokes always spoils his stories. It is the man with the mournful face whose quips seem the merriest. It is an old saying that one must "laugh and grow fat," but modern science has learned that we must "laugh and grow wise."—New York American.

OLD MAN HARE.

The Actor's Meeting With Gladstone Outside the Theater.

John Hare, the eminent English actor-manager, said that the most delightful compliment he ever received was from Mr. Gladstone. It was a double ended compliment. Whichever way you took it it was satisfactory.

Mr. Hare earned fame playing old men's parts, his character as Mr. Gold in "A Pair of Spectacles" being a good example. Added to this was a horror of having his picture taken.

Mr. Gladstone had never seen a picture of the actor, but he knew him well behind the scenes as well as before the footlights. The premier's favorite play was "A Pair of Spectacles," and he always went behind the scenes to chat awhile with the actor. The really old man and the made up old man would sit there and talk in the most delightful way for an hour after the show.

One day the Earl of Rosebery had Mr. Gladstone to dinner, and he also invited his friend John Hare. The actor came in smooth-shaven, looking about thirty-five. He was presented to Mr. Gladstone, and the prime minister shook his hand most cordially and said:

"My dear sir, I am very, very glad to meet you. I know your father very, very well. Splendid actor! Fine old man!"

It took the whole evening for the earl and Mr. Hare to convince him that this son was really the father.—London Tatler.

Taxicabs in 1711.

Something over a couple of centuries ago the principle of the taxicab was known, remarks an exchange. An advertisement in the London Daily Courant of Jan. 13, 1711, announces that at the Sign of the Seven Stars, under the piazza of Covent Garden, a chariot was on view that would travel without horses and measure the miles as it goes. It was capable of turning and reversing and could go uphill as easily as on level ground.

A Subdued Vocalist.

"Pa, you sing bass in the choir, don't you?" asked Bobby Smithers.
"Yes, my son," replied Mr. Smithers.
"And ma sings soprano?"
"That's right."
"Well, there's one thing I don't understand."
"What is it?"
"Mrs. Tompkins says you sing mighty big in public and mighty small at home."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

A Puzzle.

"Some differences are very puzzling."
"Like what, for instance?"
"If you write mean and bad things about a man in a book, it is biography. If you tell the same things about him on the back porch it's gossip."—Baltimore American.

SNAPSHOTS OF NOTABLE PERSONS

Count Cadorna, Italian Commander in Chief.

Count Luigi Cadorna, commander in chief of the Italian armies now operating against the Austrians, was born and reared in a military atmosphere. He was born sixty-five years ago in Piedmont, the most martial of the Italian provinces. His ancestors were soldiers.

He began his military education at the age of ten, when he entered the military school at Milan, continuing his studies five years later at the military academy at Turin. At seventeen he was made a sublieutenant on the general staff and began a course at the School of War. At twenty-five he was a captain and eight years later was given command of a regiment of infantry. He reached the grade of general in 1898 and five years ago was made commander of an army corps. When the present war broke out last August he was raised to the post of commander in chief of the Italian army by King Victor Emmanuel and assigned the task of putting the army in war condition.

Count Cadorna married in 1881 the Marchioness Balbi. He has four children, a son and three daughters. Two of the latter are nuns, while the third is a writer. The son is an army officer.

Unique American Families.

The Harrison family, like the Adams family of Massachusetts, has its illustrious genealogical tree carries the names of one signer of the Declaration of Independence and two presidents of the United States, and in this respect the Adames and the Harrisons stand apart in a class by themselves. These distinctions in one family, it can be noted, will never again be equalled. They remain unique in the history of the country.

He Wasn't Hissing.

One of the ushers approached a man who appeared to be annoying those about him.

"Don't you like the show?"
"Yes, indeed!"
"Then why do you persist in hissing the performers?"
"Why, m-m-m alive, I w-was-n't hissing. I w-was s-s-saying—saying to S-s-s-sammie that the s-s-singing is s-s-s-superb."—New York Globe.

Full Particulars.

The prosecuting witness in the damage suit against the city was giving in his testimony.
"Now, then, Mr. Bleedem," said his lawyer, "you will please tell the jury where you were injured."
"On my knee, in my feelings and right in front of the city hall," rapidly answered the witness, fearing an objection on the part of the other attorney.—Case and Comment.

Something to Smile At.

"Try to smile," said the head of the department store. "Look at yonder clerk. He is always smiling."
"He finds it easy to smile. He sells face powder to pretty girls. I sell collar buttons to old grouchies."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A loving heart is the beginning of all knowledge.—Carlyle.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

ABOUT MUSHROOMS.

THIS delicacy is more easily prepared than the average person supposes.

Mushrooms must first be peeled, and this is best done by hand. The skin curls loosely under the edge of the mushroom, can be seized in fingers by these curly edges and peeled back to the top of the mushroom. It is generally necessary to scrape the stem and cut off a small piece of the end. Use a silver knife.

Washing is unnecessary if they are peeled with clean hands.

Cooking.
Very little cooking is necessary for mushrooms. The simplest way is to break them in small pieces, cut up the stems, add just enough water to moisten them, a lump of butter, salt and pepper. Serve in individual dishes very hot or on toast or poured around.

Beefsteak With Mushrooms.
When served with steak more water may be added to make a gravy, and this may be thickened with flour or not, as the individual taste prefers.

Baked Mushrooms.
Select large mushrooms, chop up the stems only, add fine breadcrumbs (taken from the center of a loaf, preferably stale), a lump of butter and chopped parsley, a drop of Worcestershire sauce. Stuff the mushrooms with this and bake in individual casseroles or any baking dish, basting with a little hot water and butter. Fifteen to twenty minutes will bake them and brown the stuffing. They are delicious.

Creamed Mushrooms.
Make the usual cream sauce of butter, flour, milk and salt. Strain and add the mushrooms that have been prepared according to the first recipe given. Do not cook again, but serve very hot on toast or with chicken, sweetbreads, chops or steak. An egg well beaten adds to the deliciousness of the cream sauce. Add when it comes from the fire.

Mushrooms and Oysters.
Oysters and mushrooms creamed together and served on toast; cheese, crackers, olives and ale, if not objected to; midnight and a congenial party.

The Chaffing Dish.

The mushroom is the delicacy par excellence for the evening or Sunday night supper cooked in a chaffing dish. Avoid canned mushrooms. Tough as rubber, tasteless as baby food, small and expensive—merely a decoration. Get the habit and raise your own mushrooms.

A Chicago druggist left $50,000 to his dog.

Women mail carriers are replacing the men in London.

Mosquitoes will not bite girls wearing yellow stockings, is a discovery reported from Georgia.

A casket maker in Brooklyn sues for divorce, alleging that an undertaker embalmed his wife's love for him.

Seeing pursuing dogs near, a deer committed suicide near Brewsters, N. Y., by jumping in front of a locomotive.

An Opinion.

Hudson Maxim, inventor of high explosives and one of the world's greatest chemists, says, "The wreath of cigarette smoke which curls about the head of the growing lad holds his brain in an iron grip which prevents it from growing and his mind from developing just as surely as the iron shoe does the foot of the Chinese girl."—American Boy.

An After Dinner Trick.

Take a dinner plate and fill with water to the depth of an eighth of an inch, perhaps a little more. Then put a small bit of candle in the center, light and over it place a tall glass tumbler, such as lemonade or iced tea is served in. Just as the inverted tumbler touches the plate the water will rise within the glass.

A SCOUT'S ESCAPE
By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

During the Indian troubles which followed the close of the civil war I was attached to various western forts and camps as scout and dispatch rider and in that capacity had my full share of adventures. It was my fortune or misfortune almost at the outset of my career to strike the Sioux a blow which made them forever after hungry for my life.

It soon became known among the Sioux what had happened, and every branch of the tribe swore to have my life. A reward of ten ponies was offered to any one who would kill me and twenty if I were taken alive. I was advised by every one to clear out of that locality, but I refused to go till the long expected war finally broke out, and I was attached to a moving column.

I was finally made a prisoner under singular circumstances. I was returning from the flying column to Fort Wallace with dispatches. I had set out soon after dark and made a good twenty-five miles when a heavy fog settled on the plains. It wouldn't have bothered an Indian to keep the points of the compass, but after I turned and twisted among some dry ravines I had to own up that I was lost. My horse was just as badly off. When I gave him his head he came to a stop. The only thing to do was to dismount and wait for daylight. I was sitting on the ground, not feeling a bit sleepy, and my horse was lying down when a band of thirty-seven Indians, all mounted, walked right on to me through the fog. I heard the footsteps of their horses, but could not locate them in the fog until too late. When I leaped up it was with the thought that I might make a break for it on foot, but before I could turn they were all about me, and in another minute I was made prisoner.

The Indians were as much surprised as I was, and it was broad daylight before they identified me. Up to that time they had treated me fairly well. When it was known I was the scout whose life they had so long thirsted after half a dozen bucks tried their best to tomahawk me on the spot, but were restrained.

When their anger had cooled down there was as much rejoicing as if they had captured a fort. Six warriors were called out as a guard, and soon after sunrise I was put in their charge and started for a big Sioux village on Deer creek, between the two forks of the Republican river. I was, of course, disarmed. Then my elbows were tied together and my feet tied under the horse, and for fear the horse would run off with me he was led by a lariat.

When we reached the village I was put in a tepee and my arms unbound. It was the third day after my capture before I was disturbed. Then, most of the warriors having returned to the village on purpose to witness my death, I was led out at 3 o'clock in the afternoon to undergo the preliminary to actual torture. This is running the gauntlet.

I got ready as well as I could, and when the signal came I sprang away at the top of my speed. Blow after blow fell upon me as the savages shouted their delight, and to my great surprise, I at length reached the end. There I fell in a heap, and they gave me ten minutes to brace up for the run back. I made only half the distance this time, being struck such a blow over the head with a club that I sank down unconscious. When I had recovered my senses they returned me to the lodge, where I lay for many hours, expecting to be taken out any moment for torture. They would have finished me but for the fact that the wife of Little Feather, who was in another village fifty miles away, had not yet arrived. She wanted to be in at the death.

The squaw arrived soon after midnight. My ankles were tightly lashed, and I could not sleep.

Half an hour after daylight the village was astir, and at sunrise a squaw brought me some breakfast, and the lashings around my ankles were cast off. I learned several years after that it was intended to oblige me to run the gauntlet again. I was eating the meal the squaw had brought when a sudden excitement arose outside. There was a great shouting, followed by cheers and the report of firearms, and the next minute the 200 frontiersmen who had been raised in Kansas and Nebraska as an independent force charged into the village. It was a complete surprise to the Indians, but not for long. It wasn't five minutes before the fleeing warriors rallied for defense, but before that time I was safe. At the first alarm I sprang up and ran out of the lodge full against one of the guards, and as I ran I was fired at two or three times. I was with the horsemen in a minute or two, and after a bit I got a rifle and took an active part in the hot fight going on. We were driven off after a couple of hours, but we got every pony in the herd and burned all the lodges, and they had many a dead warrior to mourn over.

It was singular that in after years I should meet the squaw of Little Feather on the reservation and have a long talk with her. So it happened, and she calmly told me that she had been promised my scalp and it would have been her hand which would have ended my agonies after I had amused the warriors to their fill as a prisoner at the stake.

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite
Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.
Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Welsh's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.

FARM FOR SALE
110 Acres in Cumberland Township, 2 miles from Harney, 10 Acres Timber, balance high state of cultivation; running water, well fenced. 9 Room Brick House and Summer House. Cement walks, Bank Barn 50 x 74 and Steer shed; water system to all buildings, a model farm, price $6,500, terms to suit purchaser.
